MANHOOD

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

JOE SIEG.

BY ALEXANDER ANDERSON.

Who are the heroes we hail to-day,
And circle their brows with wreaths of bay?
Is it the warrior back again,
To be girt by throngs of his fellow-men?
The statesman fighting in keen debate
For the laws that will make his country great?
Or the poet, whose spirit in his song
Withers like fire the front of wrong?
Yes, these are heroes on whom we may call,
But a greater still is behind them all.
Who? And we shout with a ringing cheer:
"Joe Sieg the railway engineer,
Who did his duty and never thought
He did any more than a driver ought."

Look at Sieg, I say, as he stands
With the lever clutch'd in his oily hands,
And hearing naught but the grind of the wheel
On the clanking rail underneath his heel,
Or, lighting his pipe for a whiff or two,
Yet looking ahead as drivers do.
Now any one seeing him thus would have said,
With a very doubtful shake of his head:
"Poor stuff after all out of which to plan
Your hero when action calls for the man."
So you would think, but listen and hear
The story of Sieg, the engineer:

Down the Pennsylvania line,
In the light of an afternoon's sunshine,
Came Sieg with a train of cars behind,
And hundreds of lives that were in his mind.
Little thought he of danger near
As he watched for signals set at clear.
If he thought at all, and that thought could be said,
As he stood on the foot-plate looking ahead,
It was this: to do what a driver could do—
Run sharp to his time, nor be overdue.

So along the metals in smoke and glare,
With Sieg at his post by the levers there,
Engine and cars like a whirlwind tore
Till, just as the stroker drew open the door
Of the furnace, at once through each black flue came
The quick back-draught, bringing with it the flame
That, scorching with lightening fingers of pain,
Drove Sieg and his stroker back to the train.

Back they went, bearing all the brunt
Of the fiery tongues that were hissing in front.
They caught at the cars in their wild desire,
That in less than a moment were muffled in fire.
The engine, like some wild steed that is free,
Shot ahead with a shriek of defiant glee.
Behind were hundreds of lives in a tomb
That was hot with the breath of their awful doom.
To leap from the train would be certain death,
To stay would be food for the flame's wild breath.

Now was the time for your hero to plan:
The hour had come, and Sieg was the man.
Not a moment he stood, for at once he saw
His duty before him, and that was law.
Not a single thought of himself came near
To shake his grand brave spirit with fear,
Only there rose, like a flash, in his eye,
As in those when the last stern moment is nigh,
A look that would do all that duty could claim,
And with one wild rush Sieg was into the flame.

The red tongues quiver'd and clutch'd at him;
They tore the flesh from arm and limb,
They wove, like scarlet demons, between
The engine and him a fiery screen.
But he fought his way to his terrible fate
Till he felt his feet touch the tender plate.
Then, blind with the flame and the scorching breath,
And weak from his terrible struggle with death,
He groped for the levers, clutch'd them at length,
And, with one wild effort of failing strength,
'Mid the hissing of fire and the engine's roar,
Threw off the steam, and could do no more.

When the engine at last was brought to a stand,
Not a life was lost out of all that band.
No life, did I say? Alas! there was one,
But not till his duty was nobly done.
For, back in the tender, silent and grim,
Blackened and scalded in body and limb,
Lay Sieg, who had, without aid, and alone,
Saved hundreds of lives and lost his own.

That is the story, plain and clear,
Of Sieg, the railway engineer.
Honor to him, and no stint of praise,
From the best of hearts in these modern days.
Honor to Seig! I say, and hail
This last Jim Bludso of the rail,
Who did his duty and never thought
He did any more than a driver ought.

"A OFFSCOURING."

[Christian Union.]

"Well, yes, ma'am, I have stole!"

"Why, John!"

"You asked me, didn't you?"

"Yes, I asked you," the mission teacher replied, a sad, almost disgusted expression upon her sweet, young face.

"What did you ask me for, if you didn't want me to tell you? I could a lied," the boy went on in a stolid sort of way, and yet with a ring of feeling in his voice.

"No, you couldn't, Johnny," the teacher answered with a smile, "because you promised me that you would always tell the truth to me."

"Well, I didn't go back on it, did I?"

"No, Johnny. Have you any objection to telling me how often you have taken things that didn't belong to you?"

"Mobbe I can't remember them all," the boy replied. "I never lifted anything particular. Once, when the old woman where I hang out got sick and cried a blue streak for oranges, and nobody had the money to get them, I asked the old cove that kept the grocery store to trust me for a couple till next day. He wouldn't do it, and that night I stole six from him.

"Why, Johnny!"

"Why didn't you let me have 'em then?" the boy went on doggedly. "I'd paid, 'cause I said I would. Anyhow, the old woman got well off them oranges."

"Then you are not sorry you took them?" the teacher inquired.

"Well, the old woman had to have them oranges, and somebody had to get them for her."

The teacher's face was very grave, and as her companion looked up he saw the tears in her eyes, a sight which had a curious effect upon him.

"Don't make me tell you any more, please, ma'am," he said, dropping his eyes, while his face flushed scarlet. "I ain't nothing but a offscouring, anyhow, and it ain't no good to fret about what I do. I was kinder dragged into this place, else I'd never bother you."

"What name did you call yourself?" the teacher inquired. "I didn't understand you."

"Granny Leeds always said I was an offscouring, and so I am."

"What is an offscouring, Johnny?"

"Oh! the leavings of something that ain't no good."

"Granny Leeds, as you call her, was very much mistaken about yourself, Johnny," the teacher replied. "You are not an offscouring, but one of God's own children, and He is giving you a chance to make something of yourself. How much do you think the things are worth that you have taken, in all, Johnny?"

"Those oranges were worth 4 cents apiece when I took them; that's 24, and [illegible] than two loaves at [illegible] for two fellows that froze their feet last winter, and a mackerel to make the bread go down. It's awful tough to eat bread with nothing on it; and then a base ball was worth 50 cents, and all them things would make near hand to a dollar. I don't remember anything else."

"Well, Johnny, I shall give you a dollar, and I want you to go to those places and pay for all those things."

"Then I'll have to own up," the boy interrupted.

"Wouldn't you feel better to confess, Johnny?" the young lady inquired, not a little troubled at the effect of her words.

For a moment the boy seemed lost in thought, and then lifting a frank face to his companion, said:

"I ain't never felt perticler bad about any of them things, 'cept the base ball, and that I could a' done without, but if you say so, Miss Lee, I'll give the whole thing away, only as I ain't lifted anything lately, and don't mean to again, they would suspicion me, and make me out a thief when I ain't no such thing. Don't you think it would do, ma'am, if I dropped the money in them places so they'd be sure to find it? If you don't think so I'll blow the whole thing if it takes me to the island."

"What will you do, Johnny, if somebody needs bread and oranges and you haven't got any money to buy them with."

"That's a sticker, ma'am. I dunno."

"And it wouldn't be strange if something of that kind were to happen any day."

"No, ma'am. There is something putty generally to pay with the folks I know."

"Well, Johnny, I will tell you what to do," she replied. "Here is my card, and when any of your acquaintances are in trouble I wish you would come directly to me; and if anything is amiss with you at any time, be sure and send a messenger. You had better come up to-morrow, anyway, Johnny, for I want to give you some warm clothes, and then it will be easy for you to find the place next time."

Johnny hung his head. The kindness had overpowered him, and not a word could he speak.

"I didn't mean to hurt you, Johnny," the tender-hearted teacher hurried to say. "You are willing I should help you, are you not?"

"I guess you had better let me git now, Miss Lee," the boy replied rather huskily; "you could knock me down with an eyewinker. You needn't worry about my remembering all you have said; but just now I'm all broke up."

"And I can trust you, Johnny?" the lady inquired.

"It's a go, ma'am," the boy answered simply.

Miss Lee tucked a $1 bill in his hand, and Johnny hurried out of the building.

It took considerable tact and skill, as well as time, for the boy to satisfactorily manage the business which his teacher had provided the money for. For instance, the grocer from whom he had "lifted" the oranges had sold out to another, and Johnny was obliged to hunt him up. He was at last found, poor and ill, and the boy without a moment's hesitation confessed the theft and produced the money.

"I guess I can make it 30 cents," he said, "and that'll be a little interest. If I wouldn't like to give $5 then you may shoot me for a crow."

The ex grocer was so surprised at Johnny's confession and subsequent generosity that he shook the boy's hand heartily and invited him to step in again soon, which the lad as heartily promised to do.

By nightfall these "back debts," as Johnny naively called them, were settled, and then, after a scanty meal, the boy started out with evening papers.

About a quarter to 8 he had sold out, and then as fast as his feet would carry him, he hurried to the neighborhood of the Academy of Music to watch the people go into the building. It was opera night, and this was one of Johnny's greatest pleasures, and so with his back to the lamp post, he gave himself up to the delight of watching the throng. Johnny wondered what it would be like to drive around in luxurious carriages, and have plenty of money to spend on fine clothes. He thought of the bread and herring he had eaten for his supper, and tried to imagine what it would be like to have turkey and cranberry sauce every day. Every Christmas Johnny had turkey and cranberry sauce for his dinner, and he knew by experience how nice they were. He had ridden in an ambulance with a friend of his—a newsboy, who had been run over by an express wagon, and this was the nearest approach to a carriage ride he had ever enjoyed.

He wondered, as he watched these happy, gaily-dressed people, why it was that some people had all they wanted while others were cold and hungry, and sometimes starved to death. This was not the first time that Johnny had been perplexed with such thoughts, but they had never made him feel quite so uncomfortable as on this occasion. He called to mind the warm underclothing and tidy jacket and pants which Miss Lee had given him that day, and tried to comfort himself with the thought that there was one person in the world who cared for him.

There had been a heavy fall of snow that day, and as Johnny, still absorbed with his thoughts, started to cross the street, he saw something sparkle in the snow at the side of the crossing. There had been a rush of carriages, and a few had not been able to pull up to the curb. As he picked it up he saw that it was an ornament in the shape of a cross, and studded with diamonds.

Johnny knew they were shiners, as he called them, as soon as he looked at them, so with his heart in his throat he tucked the precious jewel in his pocket, still holding it firmly in his hand. Johnny's ambition was to start a coffee and cake establishment where the newsboys could be entertained at low rates. For more than a year he had nursed this object, and here was a chance to carry it into execution. There were nine stones in the cross. Disposing of one at a time to avoid suspicion, here was money enough to last him years and years, he told himself. It puzzled him to know where he could keep the shiners, for there wasn't a soul among his acquaintances whom he dare trust with the secret. Not until he had crept into his poverty-stricken bed, with his treasure carefully hidden among the straw, did the thought occur that he ought to try and find an owner for it. Then followed a hard battle between the natural honesty of the lad and his very natural desire for creature comforts.

The person who could wear a gold thing like that "chock full of shiners," he said to himself, must have money enough to buy more shiners. Here he was, cold and hungry, with no prospect before him but to be always hungry, if not always cold; and here were these "shiners" which would set him up in business and give him a chance to help the boys. Why should he find the owner of the cross when he had nothing and the owner had everything? This fight continued until it was time for the lad to start for the morning papers. All through the busiest part of the forenoon the battle still raged, and the newsboy's thoughts were so occupied with his new-found riches that he almost forgot to attend to his customers. About half-past 10, as he passed City Hall park, he noticed a gentleman, and as he heard the words "diamond cross" spoken, Johnny slackened his pace and listened.

"The diamonds were all of the first water," one gentleman said: "it was a gift to my wife from her father and she is terribly cut up by the loss. I don't suppose we shall ever find it."

"You will advertise it, won't you?" his companion inquired.

"Oh, of course," the gentleman replied, "but more than likely it has fallen into dishonest hands, and unless the reward is equal to the value of the diamonds we shall never see them."

When the gentlemen separated the one who was interested in the diamonds entered the city hall, and after a little inquiry, Johnny discovered that this gentleman held a very honorable office in the city department. After finding this out the lad took a turn round the park to think it over again.

"Granny Leeds said I was a offscouring, and Miss Lee says I ain't," he argued to himself. "If I keep these shiners granny'll be right and Miss Lee'll be wrong. She said the Lord was giving me a chance to make something of myself. Well, now, the question is, am I or am I not a offscouring? If I keep these shiners I am, if I give them up, I ain't. Well, I ain't," and with these words on his lips, Johnny started for the gentleman's office. Nothing daunted he entered, and presented himself at the desk.

"Some of your folks have lost something, ain't they," he asked.

"They have," said the gentleman.

"Will your honor tell me what it is like?"

"It is a gold cross set with diamonds," and the gentleman described the relative position of the stones. "It was lost either in the Academy of Music last night, or on the way from that place."

Johnny's coat was off in a twinkling, and with a rip at the stitches which confined the treasure, he took it out, and put on his coat again. "I suppose that is it," he said, handing it to the gentleman. "I wanted to keep the shiners awful bad," he continued. "They'd a set me up in business, them shiners would, but you see I couldn't be such a off-scouring as that, though I have been trying to be a thief all night long. If I were your folks," he went on, "I'd get a stronger string to hold on them shiners for fear they'd be gone for good next time."

"What is your name?" the gentleman inquired, as the lad, with his cap in his hand, stood modestly before him.

"John Reaney," the boy replied.

"Have you a father and mother?" was the next question.

"Nobody, yer honor, but myself."

"Which would you prefer to do, Johnny," the gentleman next inquired, "go into business or go to school?"

"Well, I would rather go to school, ten to one," said Johnny, "but there ain't any show for that."

"We will see," said the gentleman. "Will you come into my office, Johnny, until I see what is best to be done?"

"Yes, sir," Johnny replied, the tears starting to his eyes.

"I shall want you to go home with me in an hour or two, and give my wife her diamonds, and see what she thinks of you."

"All right," said Johnny, brushing away the tears. "Anything to do now, yer honor."

The following Sunday Johnny went to the mission school for the last time, and in such clothes that Miss Lee hardly knew him. The grateful boy told his teacher all that had happened, and concluded as follows:

"I am going away to school to-morrow, and if I've got the learning stuff in me I can go to college; but Miss Lee, if it had not been for you and God, I should have been a offscouring all the days of my life.

Miraculous Escape.

W. W. Reed, druggist, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "One of my customers, Mrs. Louisa Pike, Bartona, Randolph Co., Ind., was a long sufferer with Consumption and was given up to die by her physicians. She heard of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and began buying it of me. In six months' time she walked to this city, a distance of six miles, and is now so much improved she has quit using it. She feels she owes her life to it."

ON THE ENGINE.

Running a Locomotive While Deathly Sick.

TAUNTON, Mass.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: I am an engineer on the Old Colony Railroad, and run the Fall River boat train between Fall River and Lowell, residing in Taunton. For ten years I suffered everything but death from dyspepsia. Often I had such blinding sick headaches that I could hardly see. I think this was due partly to irregular habits of eating and partly to the jar of the engine.

Remember that I had tried every medicine I heard of and had been treated by some of the best physicians in Taunton and Lowell. At this critical time Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was recommended to me. It was new to me, and with my experience of medicine, you can easily forgive me for saying that I had not a particle of faith in it.

I had taken it but a few days when I began to get better. The raw and sore feeling left my stomach and the snapping pains left my head, and soon I was all right, and have been ever since. It is the only thing that ever did me the least good, and it drove every ache, pain and discomfort completely out of my body. Now I keep KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY with me on my engine, and it goes wherever I go.

Why, I believe Favorite Remedy will cure anything. One night a while ago John Layton, an engineer who runs the main line boat train from Boston, came on my engine sick as death. He was worn out with work, had a high fever and was so nervous he almost broke down crying. "Nonsense, John," I said; "cheer up. I've got something on my engine that will set you up in a jiffy." I took out my bottle of "Favorite Remedy," and gave him a good dose. He went to bed. Two days after I saw him looking healthy as a butcher. "Dan" he said, "what was that stuff you gave me the other night?" "It was DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y.," said I. "Well, I don't care whose remedy it is, it's the thing for a man on the railroad." So say we all.

Yours, etc.,
DANIEL FYFFE.

It is your own fault if you suffer from headache, indigestion or dyspepsia. $1 will buy a bottle of Favorite Remedy and cure you.

How young old people look who have never been seriously sick, and who never worry and fret. How old young people look who fret and stew and suffer pain—all at once. But we can't altogether help our disposition, and we will sometimes get out of sorts in spite of all our caution. Then we need the best, the simplest and the safest medicine known, which is Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Purifies the blood and renews vitality in old and young.

A Valuable Testimony from Mr. F. Fowner of East Sharon, Potter county, writes under date of March 10, 1886: Dear Sir: I had been suffering from a Dropsical affection, being badly bloated and bothered for breath, not having been able to work since the first of January, but your agent, Mr. H. Presher, of Shingle House, Pa., called on me, and I purchased of him one bottle of your Great Blood Remedy. Since using it I find my health very much better, and confidently recommend it to all who are suffering from similar difficulty, or ill health.

Dennis' Home Remedies are all first-class and warranted to do good or money refunded.

Smethport, Pa., April 9, 1886.

THE sayings of many great men would fill volumes. Their doings could be written on a postal card.—New Orleans Picayune.

MR. HEARST, the new senator from California, ought to be able to rub along with economy in Washington, he is said to have an income of $2,000 a day.

CHAUNCEY BLACK'S friends are said to be laboring with the workingmen in his behalf, and if he is nominated for governor the second place on the ticket is to be given to a representative of workingmen.

HERE we are eight months after General Grant's death with his bones lying under our own soil and an amount of money in his monument fund not half as large as a New York millionaire would pay for a yacht.—New York World.

IN many sections of the country the storm of the past week was the severest that has been known for many years. It rained and snowed continuously for days and many of the rivers rose to an unprecedented height. The destruction of property was very large.

THE term of public printer Rounds will expire on the 14th of April. We believe that if a good strong democratic delegation from Chicago would now visit the president and urge the claims of a strong man from the Garden City, the president would probably appoint a New York man on or about that date.—Peoria Transcript.

THE great strike on the Gould system of railroads in the south-west is assuming alarming proportions. It hardly seems possible that bloodshed can be averted much longer. There is a fearful responsibility resting somewhere for this state of things, and is it not upon the head of the man who controls that system? We are inclined to think so.

GRANTING that the brutal massacre of negroes at Carrollton, Miss., had no political significance, let it not be forgotten that it occurred in a democratic community, in a democratic state, against an anti-democratic race, and that if it is not fully investigated and punished it will be solely due to democratic obstructions to the administration of justice.—Philadelphia Press.

IT must be that some of the papers of this state believe Senator Wallace to be a fit subject for the insane asylum. There is no more probability of his accepting the democratic nomination for governor if Gen. Beaver is the republican nominee, than there is for the winters of this latitude to be reduced to a four month's term.

CHARLES STEWART PARNELL'S venerable mother, now lying ill in New York her place of residence, suffering from the weakness of advanced age and disease of the heart, is a daughter of Admiral Stewart, who commanded the United States frigate Constitution during the war of 1812. Her husband was a country gentleman, living on his own estate of Avondale, in the county of Wicklow, Ireland. Parnell, it will be seen, inherits his pluck and spirit.

A WASHINGTON dispatch to the New York Mail and Express asserts that the silver men in congress are getting up a campaign document which has already been endorsed by about 100 of them, reiterating the position of the representatives on silver and denouncing the action of the administration as colluding with capitalistic interests. This address will be put forth about the close of the session, in time to influence the coming congressional campaign.

CHICAGO is inclined to put on frills because an embezzler was arrested, tried, convicted and sent to the penitentiary all inside of three days. Pittsburg has done better than that. A crime was committed here in the morning, the offender was arrested, given a preliminary hearing and his case at once sent before the grand jury, which at once found an indictment, the trial was held in the afternoon, resulting in conviction, sentence followed at once, and before the shades of night fell the offender was behind the bars of the penitentiary.—Pittsburg Telegraph.

THOS. MCCAMANT, ESQ., is chief clerk of the Auditor General's department at Harrisburg. At the end of Gen. Niles' term he will have filled that position with credit for six years. For many years prior to his entering the Auditor General's department he was chief clerk of the state department, a position which he also filled with signal ability. There is no man in the state more familiar with the business of the two departments or more capable of assuming supreme control of either. If civil service ideas had any weight in nominating conventions Thomas would probably receive the nomination for Auditor General on the republican state ticket, but he will very likely discover, as others have before him, that the civil service business will not stand in the way when candidates are being made, however much it may be trumpeted in platforms, and when the vital moment comes the "heaviest battalions" win all the time.

THE QUARREL.

There is a rumor, and we give it for what it is worth, that there was a sharp discussion between the president and Secretary Manning just before the latter was stricken down by apoplexy, but the subject under consideration at that time only reached the public ear within the past few days. The story runs that a letter relating to the appointment of internal revenue collectors, to be sent to the Senate Finance Committee, was prepared at the treasury department and sent to the president for his approval. He changed its phraseology and returned it, when the secretary changed it again and forwarded it. The president was displeased at the secretary's action and over this the war of words broke out.

When the secretary left the White House he was very angry and declared his purpose to resign. Whether he made out his resignation or not before stricken down cannot be stated. It is noted as evidence of a quarrel that the president has not called on the secretary during his illness.

SHOULD NOT BE CONVENED BEFORE JULY.

The republican state committee which meet in Philadelphia on the 15th inst., for the purpose of fixing a day for holding the state convention. If there is any disposition on the part of the committee to accommodate many of the counties of the state, where established rules exist for holding primaries and county conventions, the state convention will not be called before the middle of July. The reason assigned for not calling it in that month, because of the absence of delegates to the watering-places, is an exceedingly shallow one. Outside of Philadelphia there will probably not be two dozen delegates in the convention who have ever visited a watering-place of any description, and most of the Philadelphia crowd will be of that class who have looked upon the sea and mountains through the means of fifty-cent excursions of a few hours extent. If the convention is called before the 10th of July it will necessitate the holding of two conventions this year in many of the counties.

THIS is not a good year for democrats in the matter of elections. On Monday throughout the country the republicans almost universally swept the field. They carried their ticket in [illegible] by from 1,600 to 7,000. In [illegible] which is the democratic [illegible] two years ago by a thousand majority the republicans this year elected the entire municipal ticket by majorities ranging [illegible] upward of a thousand. [illegible] goes under a democratic administration.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our regular correspondent.]

In the early part of the week the administration threatened to break down physically. While Secretary Manning was still lying at death's door, the attorney general and secretary of interior were also taken sick. No sooner had Messrs. Garland and Lamar reached a state of convalescence than the president's private secretary was stricken with neuralgia. Secretary Manning's friends are still apprehensive about his recovery. The paralysis has partially disappeared but the patient has not gained strength. He is restricted to a diet of beef tea and milk for the purpose of reducing his weight.

It is said the worry of the telephone investigation has a good deal to do with Attorney General Garland's indisposition. He has not said a great deal about the telephone troubles, but he has been annoyed over them and when he has discussed them it has been with evident denunciation.

A prominent physician who was speaking of the irrational policy of close confinement and no exercise pursued by the cabinet officers remarked that the president was sure to succumb in a similar way one of these days unless he would heed advice. He said Cleveland is taking no exercise, but is sitting up there in the White House all day letting his blood vessels grow soft and fat. He has gained forty pounds since he has been there. Before he knows it some excitement will send a rush of blood to his head, one of the blood vessels will burst, and he will die of cerebral hemorrhage and apoplexy.

Labor questions have been discussed in congress this week, and there is much diversity of opinion among congressmen in regard to the practicability of legislation with regard to arbitration. A variety of measures have been introduced each proposing a new plan for settling strikes. The gentlemen who have presented these bills are now fearful that the labor committee will refuse to report some of them. The majority on this committee is opposed to any action by congress looking to the legislation of arbitration between railroad companies and their employes.

Said Gen. Weaver of Iowa, who is strongly opposed to federal arbitration: "The bills on this subject are all claptrap. I do not use the word in an offensive sense," continued he, "but we have laws now, state laws and national laws, that cover everything there is to cover in this matter." He wanted to know how the judgment of an arbitration board could be enforced. "You cannot compel a man to go back to work if they will not do so of their own accord," and he held that a tribunal could not be created to try the case with a thousand men on one side and a railroad company on the other.

Senator Hoar of Mass. asks for longer sessions of Congress every year. Representative Reed of New York asks for more hours of work every day in the house. Between the two the people have a chance of getting more law making for their money. On the other hand Representative Campbell of New York has introduced a measure giving the government clerks a Saturday half holiday every week. This is an immensely popular proposition, throughout the departments at least.

The failure of the house committee on rivers and harbors to recommend the appropriation asked for continuing the improvement of the Potomac flats, just in front of the city, is calling forth much indignant criticism. The reason given by the committee for not including this work in the bill this year is that the title to the flats is in dispute and that the attorney general although he has been frequently called on by congress has never given an opinion on the subject.

Nearly a million dollars has already been expended on this work and the engineer in charge of it says if it stops but a short time will be enough to undo all that has been accomplished. Others urge that it is a most inopportune time for retarding this important improvement because there is every prospect that in three years time Washington will be the scene of an exposition, national and international in character and extent and commemorative of great events. Thousands of people from all parts of North and South America and from all parts of the world will come as visitors.

It is deemed of the utmost importance that the river front improvement be completed by that time. Considerably more than one-third of the work has been done. Three hundred and fifty acres have been reclaimed. As yet the newly filled flats are scarcely more attractive to the eye, than were the great stretches of mud that have disappeared. All night long, as well as all day long, the dredges are at work on the river front, and many who have waked at night in the northwestern part of the city, have wondered what the sound of their puffing engines meant—so unused are the citizens of the capital to noises which are familiar to busier communities. R.

Washington, April 6, '86.

Nearing the End.

The passive attitude that has been maintained by the indirectly affected public in the trial of strength that has been and is now being made by the Gould Southwestern system of railroads on the one hand and the Knights of Labor in the west on the other was the natural result of the universal sympathy of mankind for the weaker party in any contest. So long as the struggle was carried on without a resort to violence, and until the last hope had departed that the questions in dispute would be settled by arbitration, the weight of public opinion must have continued in support of the employes. But their chosen district leaders were not strong enough to restrain the hot-headed and evil-inclined few among the strikers from damaging property and committing acts of personal violence, and the authorities of the law are now taking measures, with the approval of the general public, to restore order and preserve the peace.

With so many trains moving on the Missouri Pacific railroad, and the places made vacant three weeks ago supplied to within one-fourth of the entire number, it is evidently a misapplication of terms to insist upon styling the present condition of affairs along that railroad a strike. The Knights should understand this and act accordingly. Concessions may now be secured that it would be impossible to grant a few days or weeks hence. The managers at this time have room for about seventeen out of every fifty of the former strikers. In a short time the seventeen will become ten, then five, until, finally, the men who quit work will find themselves excluded almost entirely. Rapid individual action being forbidden, the slow process of deliberation by concerted bodies of men must be awaited, and here again the men now out are at a disadvantage. Unable to gain their ends by superior or controlling force, they are also powerless to seek ameliorating agencies through their own personal efforts. This is either a serious defect in organization or the result of injudicious and precipitate action at the outset. Prompt recognition of the uselessness of further prolonging the struggle is now the manly and honorable course for the Knights to pursue. They may bear defeat without discredit, but the continuance of a guerrilla warfare would remove them at once beyond the pale of public sympathy.—Phila. Record.

Lawlessness the Foe of Labor.

Lawlessness is ever the foe of honest industry. No cause can hope to command the considerate favor or sympathy of the people of this free land, that adopts lawlessness or violence to attain its ends. All such efforts must not only put the lawless outside the pale of public tolerance, but they must react fearfully against any organization that actively or passively sustains them.

The labor strike on the Texas Pacific Railroad began in violence and logically gravitated into lawlessness and murder. It is no question of vital moment whether the officers or the strikers opened fire, as it is admitted in the most plausible story that can be presented in excuse for the strikers, that they were in a lawless defiance of the officers, attempting to derange a switch. The weight of testimony as given in all reports from the scene of the tragedy proves that the strikers opened fire from ambush and the mortal or dangerous wounds of three officers confirms the wanton and murderous violence of the strikers against the officers of the law.

The Knights of Labor should promptly disown and denounce this lawless and murderous action of their brethren in Texas. The methods of the Texas cowboy are at war with every principle cherished by the Knights of Labor organization and there should be no tolerance with men who, in the name of the organization destroy property or commit murder. No officer of the United States court in whose jurisdiction the Texas Pacific is at present can entertain the question of re-employing men who destroy life and property or who violently interfere with the freedom of labor and no railway officials can trust their passengers or property to those who resort to violence for every real or imaginary wrong.

While public sentiment has been overwhelmingly opposed to the lawless strike in Texas and Missouri the bloody tragedy of Saturday must leave the strikers without a vestige of sympathy from any but anarchists who would destroy both labor and property. It will doubtless hasten the overthrow of the lawless and the only possible way for the Knights of Labor to maintain themselves, is by the promptest and boldest condemnation of every form of violence in labor disputes.—Philadelphia Times.

THE Philadelphia Record says that if the Knights of Labor would strike against the 80 cent silver dollar they would vindicate the reasonableness of their order. The silver is not an 80 but an 100 cent dollar and what the Record wants the Knights to do is not to strike against accepting 20 cents on the dollar less than they have earned, for it knows that they are not accepting such money now, but to strike that capitalists may get 120 cents for their gold dollar, which will not buy a penny's worth more than a silver dollar. The Knights would vindicate the reasonableness of their order beautifully in doing that. This same able contemporary is working double turn in trying to prove to the Knights that they would vindicate the reasonableness of their order also in striking against the tariff so that their labor might be put in competition with that of men whose wages enable them to buy meat only once a week. The Knights would vindicate the reasonableness of their order beautifully in doing that too. Our esteemed contemporary should rub its high forehead and make another striking suggestion.—Pittsburg Times.

The bit was literally stolen from him. That's all, and we beg of you, Jonathan, not to think for a moment that this matter disturbs us. We referred to it simply as the main item in politics.

The Star says: "By a blunder in the publication of the court proclamation it [illegible] that a term of civil court would be held in Smethport this week. The facts are that an argument court is being held in this city this week, commencing today, and the civil term will be held in Smethport commencing the 19th inst." "The facts are" that the [illegible] court proclamation is published for an argument, not for a civil or common pleas court. There was no blunder whatever in the publication but the blunder, [illegible] was an argument court being held in Bradford instead of the county seat without even the officers of the court having any official knowledge of it until the day before it convened.

This bridge and the roads leading to it, are used for travel between the Court House and the Poor Farm property, and the question very properly arises, why should not the county help defray the expense of keeping them in repair? The borough authorities are clearly of the opinion that the county should do so. A special meeting of the council will be held on the 19th inst. to receive the reports of the committees appointed at the last meeting.

[illegible] worth of goods and [illegible] money which was taken from the drawer. The thieves, three in number, procured an axe at Mr. Doyle's mill with which to do the work. Their names are John Dunham, John Dailey and Reuben Hill, the latter having been formerly employed as brakeman on the Clermont branch of the B., N. Y. & P. railroad. Mr. Doyle's store is located on the public road leading from Larrabee's to Port Allegany, about two miles from the former place. His mill is by the side of the B., N. Y. & P. railroad, nearly a half mile from the store, and on the opposite side of the track of the railroad. The burglars secreted the goods in a brush-heap, on low, swampy ground, within three or four rods from the railroad and only a short distance from the mill. [illegible] Williams Doyle was hunting on Saturday, and in passing the brush-heap he discovered what had the appearance of dry goods under the brush. Upon examination he found the goods which had probably been taken from the store. He immediately notified the owners and from that moment relays of men under the special charge of Constable [illegible] watched that brush-heap until Wednesday noon at an unexpected hour, when a man was seen approaching the place. At that hour—dinner-time—there was only one man [illegible] and he was unarmed. As he started toward the burglar, for the purpose of arresting him, the other two men made their appearance. The watcher immediately shouted for help when the burglars vacated that locality as fast as their legs would carry them. The neighborhood was immediately aroused when a dozen men started in pursuit. The burglars took for the woods in the direction of Larrabee. Dunham the young man of the gang, turned out and was captured at the head of [illegible] hollow. In the capture he received a [illegible] shot [illegible] the particulars of which we have not learned, [illegible] that it is not of a serious character. A Word to Workers.

If your avocations are mentally or physically laborious, if they subject you to exposure in inclement weather, if they confine you to the desk and are of a nature to involve wear and tear of brain and nervous strain, you may occasionally require some restorative tonic. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the article for you. It stimulates the failing energies, invigorates the body and cheers the mind. It enables the system to throw off the debilitating effects of undue fatigue, gives renewed vigor to the organs of digestion, arouses the liver when inactive, which is very often the case with people whose pursuits are sedentary, renews the jaded appetite, and encourages healthful repose. Its ingredients are safe, and its credentials, which consist in the hearty endorsement of persons of every class of society, are most convincing. Admirably is it adapted to the medical wants of workers.

Working Out Road Tax

The supreme court of Pennsylvania has recently rendered several decisions of general interest in the matter of road tax. The right of farmers to work out their road tax has been generally, if not universally conceded, supervisors in a few townships insisted on the tax being paid in money. A test case has been decided in favor of the taxpayers, and their right to work out the tax distinctly and finally affirmed. In other cases collectors of road taxes have claimed a commission on the part worked out, as well as that paid into the township treasury. The supreme court has decided that all claims for such commissions should be rejected, the working out of the tax imposing no labor on the collector or treasurer, but on the supervisor who is paid for his service.

There are business men in McKean county who might peruse the following from the Norwich (N. Y.) Telegraph with profit:

A printer stood at the desk of a business man the other day and noticed him using letter-heads [illegible] he had bought of a New York [illegible] house. [illegible] replied "I would think you [illegible] when I know that you can get the same goods just as good of me and I am a fellow citizen." GENUINE MERIT
IS SURE TO WIN.

We believe the RUSSIAN RHEUMATISM CURE has real, genuine merit. It is this faith which has led us to put our money into it so liberally. We have put more into it than money—money could not buy the full name we have gained by twenty years of honorable business dealing right here on Market St., Philadelphia, and yet so great is our faith in the Russian Rheumatism Cure that we are willing to stake our reputation on it as a safe, speedy and permanent cure for all Rheumatic troubles. Could we offer any better guaranty of good faith? Others besides ourselves have tested its merits, and add their hearty and unequivocal endorsement.

We send to all who ask it a pamphlet containing much of such testimony. And yet if you have Rheumatism why suffer one day longer than is necessary. It costs only $2.50 to be cured, and while you are making up your mind to try it you might be made well. The EXPERIENCE.

"Calvert, T[illegible] [illegible] 1882.

"I wish to express my appreciation of the valuable qualities of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

as a cough remedy.

"While with Churchill's army, just before the battle of [illegible], I contracted a severe cold, which terminated in a dangerous cough. I found no relief till on our march we came to a country store, where, on asking for some remedy, I was urged to try AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

"I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since then I have kept the PECTORAL constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be an invaluable remedy for throat and lung diseases. J. W. WHITLEY."

Thousands of testimonials certify to the prompt cure of all bronchial and lung affections, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily.

on this subject. [illegible] seems generally recognized that when timber is preserved by means of the products of coal distillation, that the use of the light oils, as formerly specified by engineers, is not so effective as the heavier products, or, in other words, that wood, when impregnated with the lighter products of coal distillation, parts with them much more rapidly than it does with napthaline and the other heavier oils which do not evaporate so rapidly.

Mr Henry Aitken conceived the idea that timber could be effectively preserved by steeping it in melted napthaline, and he has so far met with remarkable success. We are informed that ordinary white wood, treated by the napthaline process, has been used in coal pits and shows not the slightest sign of decay, whereas the best seasoned timber in the same time (four years) becomes perfectly useless from dry rot. Railway wagons made for the North British Railway Company, the timber for which had been treated by the napthaline process, after running for three years, were lately examined and not the slightest sign of change could be traced. The timber for these wagons was treated in the wet log, straight from the timber pond and, after being treated, the timber was worked into wagons as easily as if it had never been treated by any process.

The advantage of this method [illegible] for timber to be properly creosoted should be seasoned, whereas, by the napthaline process dry or green timber can be effectually treated, and timber so treated is hardened and does not contract or expand according as the weather is dry or wet.

In working the napthaline process no machinery is required. A tank half filled with napthaline is heated by steam, or by a fire under it, up to 150 or 160 degrees Fahr.; the wood to be treated is thrown into the tank and kept there for several hours, according to the size of the timber, and when it is withdrawn it is found that six or eight pounds of napthaline have been absorbed per cubic foot; that all the albuminoid compounds have been decomposed; that the timber is dry and clean, having a slight aromatic smell; and that it can at once be worked up and painted in the usual manner.

Mr Boulton in his paper read at the Institution of Civil Engineers seems also to think that the heavier products of the distillation of coal are more effective in preserving timber than the lighter oils, so that in Mr Aitken's napthaline process we appear to have a cheap and cleanly mode of preserving timber as well as a means which enables us to dispense with the cost of seasoning wood before using it.—London Engineering.

The Coming Bonnet.

"What will the coming bonnet be like?" responded a man milliner [illegible]. "It will be unlike anything ever before attempted. [illegible] and repress your [illegible]. The [illegible]. They will not [illegible] ornament [illegible]. What is the craze? [illegible] fruits and flowers [illegible]. The flowers to be used are [illegible] of the brilliancy of [illegible]. It is possible that many [illegible] may be trained to [illegible] bunch of buds on the coming bonnet.

How about [illegible]? Well, after all [illegible] has been premeditated [illegible] for the [illegible] early vegetable gardens. Here is a bunch of mushrooms," continued the man milliner, fondling [illegible] that looked more like pepper apples or half ripe tomatoes than they did like mushrooms. "Perhaps one of these will [illegible] a hat, in conjunction with that—a bunch of radish that looked so natural as to tempt the appetite—[illegible] very small [illegible] with gracefully flowing green stems [illegible] artificial half ripe tomatoes. [illegible] beets, turnips, potatoes [illegible] the like with the rest, but they will be so artistically arranged [illegible] will readily forget that they are vegetables."—Albany Express.

The Louisville [illegible], a democratic journal, has just printed a double-leaded editorial in which it condemns the acts of the dominant party in [illegible] in scathing terms. It says: There are few states [illegible] in the union that is so ill governed [illegible] by rings. [illegible] that has been in session [illegible] sixty days [illegible] and little or nothing has been accomplished except what has been done for the private benefit of individual members or the cliques they represent. It goes on to say that Kentucky needs a better assessment law, a better jury system, an improvement in the schools, a method of reducing the debt or the revenue, and a stoppage of the rings and jobs and selfishness of the democrats of the legislature, and concludes: Democrats may think this state of affairs can continue and even grow worse, if possible, without a ground swell from the tax ridden masses that may result in the overthrow of our cumbersome past [illegible] majority, but the error is a fatal one. The democratic party of Kentucky must effect a reform in our State affairs, or the opposition, however weak and despised it may be, will effect it for us.

Why do Doctors Prescribe Liquors?

Because they know not what else to do, or because some times a little liquor serves to tickle the exhausted [illegible] digestion. But this liquor prescription is bad business for the patients, for it has [illegible] drunkards out of a large majority of them. Brown's Iron Bitters does not kindle a temporary fire. It nourishes, enriches, strengthens, purifies. It drives out debility and dyspepsia, and sets the invigorated system at work on a basis of health.

"I NEVER patronize patent medicines." Don't you? Why not? You patronize "patent" articles of a hundred varieties—why not patent medicines. "Because they are often worthless." True, but not always. Frequently they are the very best in the world, representing the [illegible] experience. At least we know that Dr Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is one of these, and for all troubles of the blood, liver and urinary organs it stands on its merits, and not on advertising.

HALL'S Hair Renewer renews, cleanses, brightens, and invigorates the hair, and restores faded or gray hair to its youthful color and lustre. People with gray hair prefer to use the Renewer rather than proclaim to the world through their bleached locks, that they are becoming aged, and passing on to decay.

THE grand secret of female beauty is health—the secret of health is the power to eat, digest and assimilate a proper quantity of wholesome food. Take Vinegar Bitters. It will cleanse the stomach from the vital organs, give a perfect digestion, purify the blood, clear up the complexion, and produce a state of genuine female loveliness, with which no cosmetic can compare.

STATED by H. B. Cochran, druggist, Lancaster, Pa.—"Have guaranteed over 200 bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters for dyspepsia, sour stomach, bilious attacks, liver and kidney troubles."

I COULD scarcely speak, it was almost impossible to breathe through my nostrils. Using Ely's Cream Balm a short time I was entirely relieved. My head has not been so clear nor voice so strong in years. I recommend it as a valuable remedy to all afflicted with Catarrh or colds in the head.—J. O. Tichenor, Shoe Merchant, Elizabeth, N. J.
